Calibrize is a software solution that can help you adjust the colors of your monitor in the easiest way possible. The user interface is simple, and you shouldn't encounter any difficulties when working with this tool. Thanks to its wizard approach, it can be used by novices and professionals alike. The developer included only three steps for helping you adjust the colors of the monitor. The first one allows users to adjust the level of contrast and brightness. You should be careful when doing so, as they may trigger some unwanted changes. For example, if you intend to use the maximum contrast on a CRT tube, this could lower the life span of the monitor. The second step enables gamma correction. This proves to be particularly easy, thanks to its built-in sliders. Since the gamma of the monitor is measured in three different color channels, the application provides there different sliders for each channel (red, green and blue). The application automatically displays the adjustments in real-time, by changing the colors of your monitor. The third step allows users to save the current settings. The new colors are loaded automatically each time the computer starts up. Additionally, the program will install a monitor profile into your system. Once you have gone through all the steps, the monitor will automatically be adjusted according with your settings. During our testing we have noticed that the program is able to change the colors of the monitor pretty quickly and without errors. To sum things up, Calibrize proves to be a stable solution when it comes to changing the colors of your monitor. What is new in this release: Fixed bugs and updated help text. What is new in version 1.0.5.6: A new function has been added: you can now export an image in .jpeg format.
